The first column begins here and continues for several lines so that a reading order that runs across the page rather than down it is obvious when the tokens are compared.

The second column begins here and should appear after every line of the first column, not interleaved with it, when the parser declares a layout-aware reading order.